

Dr Emma Andrews

Kia ora koutou,

I'm Emma and it is a pleasure to have the opportunity to be a parent representative on the Ngaio School board.

I am a molecular biologist and biochemist by training and have spent a large proportion of my career in academia as a research scientist. Since November 2021 I have been with Tiakitanga Pūtaiao Aotearoa, Biosecurity New Zealand, based within the Ministry for Primary Industries. I currently lead a team of analysts and data scientists whose role is to keep decision makers informed of changes to the global biosecurity threat environment. In this role, I get to do what I love and serve not only our country, but the people I work with.

Our eldest started at Ngaio School in Term 2 2022, and our second will follow suit early 2024. It has been great to become part of the Ngaio School whānau. We have lived in Ngaio since we moved to Wellington in 2019 and really value the Ngaio community spirit.

I am looking forward to continuing to support Ngaio School as a parent representative on the Ngaio School board.
